It's strange which pictures and scenes stay with you. Close to the end of our journey in China in 2019 we were back in Hangzhou, only to learn that it was basically impossible to get into restaurants late in the evening - read: after 20:00. We ended up going to the food market of the closest mall, because that was open till 22:00. On our way back, after a rather rainy day, the streets were mostly empty, including this normally busy with people and tourists street.
