

Peter 's Homepage

Hi! I'm Peter, and you're on my homepage. It's an old phrase, but this place is my home, my own little corner on the vast internet. It's been around since 1999, had numerous domains, designs, and iterations. I'm trying to encourage people to have their spot on the web as well.

About this site

What is on the site

There is a mix of content on this page:

- tinkerings with linux, embedded, internet things are under the IT section
- travels & longer braindumps are under journal
- photos in photo
- while notes contain replies and miscellaneous entries

The technical parts

At this point in time, it's mainly a static HTML website, generated from Markdown + YAML frontmatter files with Python, plus a couple of PHP scripts for search and proper redirecting. This is a result of a long process, which process is more or less documented under entries in IT. The engine is hidden in plane sight.

Special thanks to:

- webmention.io, so I can receive webmentions on a static site
- Telegraph, so I can easily send webmentions
- brid.gy, which connects social networks to personal websites
- fed.brid.gy, which allows websites to be present in the Fediverse on their own
- Superfeedr, for a free Websub service
- integromat, because it's possible to build a syndication workflow with a breeze
- indieweb, for existing

The retro bits

The site has a slight fascination with reminiscence of obsolete technology; therefore it provides a gopher version of the site.

About me

Contact

My main contact point is email, namely mail@petermolnar.net, but you can also reach me on XMPP/Jabber, or SMS . I regularly lurk in the #indieweb channels. This site also accepts webmentions.

I still have a Flickr account, my photos are cross-posted there. I also have Twitter, but that is only for ephemeral conversations, and all my tweets get deleted after 3 months.

I'm from Hungary, living and working in Cambridge, UK. Linux sysadmin by day, east asian martial studies practitioner on some weekday evenings. I'm happily married to Nora who shares more of my interests I thought possible, including most of my rather complex musical taste, and my love for photography.

dug too deep into nostalgia.
