

2014-05-06 10:01 UTC

Have fun. Remember that GeoCities page you built back in the mid-90s? The one with the Java applets, garish green background and seventeen animated GIFs? It may have been ugly, badly coded and sucky, but it was fun, damnit. Keep the web weird and interesting.

Build for the long web^[^1]. If human society is are able to preserve ancient papyrus, Victorian photographs and dinosaur bones, we should be able to build web technology that doesn't require us to destroy everything we've done every few years in the name of progress. - Indie Web Principles^[^2]

Links

1. <http://adactio.com/articles/1522/>
2. <http://indiewebcamp.com/>

Created by Peter Molnar <mail@petermolnar.net>, published at 2014-05-06 10:01 UTC, last modified at 2021-05-11 11:49 UTC , to canonical URL <https://petermolnar.net/note/indie-web-principles/> , licensed under CC-BY-4.0 .