Kevin's Kitchen, ruins dating back to the 12th century.

This is not HDR; the lights are actually like this in Ireland most of the time.

We were just about to leave the magnificent Wicklow Mountains behind; the bus was about to leave in 10 minutes. I was quite sad that the lights never showed the image I saw when we arrived - and which I did not photograph - until the very last moment. I ran back to the little bridge crossing the river there and took a few pictures without any time to think about the settings. Luckily it resulted in this photo.
