In 2000, we had a family vacation on Corfu. I experienced things never before: hairdryer-like hot wind in the night, scorching heat from the pavement in the afternoons, a lot hotter, than the sun itself, gyros as a starter. It was a good trip, with some spectacular views. Sadly, it seems like I lost the negative of this picture: I had it in a large print under a glass on my table for years, and during that process, I seem to have misplaced the negatives.
