

Capel Rhosydd

PENTAX K-5 II s, 87.5 mm, f/5.0, 1/500 sec, ISO 100 | Tamron SP AF 70-200mm F2.8 Di LD [IF] Macro | CC-BY-NC-ND-4.0

Always talk to the locals; especially when they have a lovely, very friendly dog, from whom there's no escape. Long story short: we were recommended that once we're up at the lake, take the bridge and the trail that goes next to the abandoned building you see on the picture - it is supposed to lead to a whole abandoned mining town. Given the weather - misty, with low hanging clouds - it would have been a hell of an experience.

Unfortunately, we couldn't do this: there was no bridge. So much rain had fallen there recently, that the bridges were literally washed away, or sunked into the lake.

coordinates: 53.101, -3.837

Created by Peter Molnar <mail@petermolnar.net>, published at 2020-09-21 09:00 UTC+01:00, last modified at 2021-05-11 11:49 UTC , to canonical URL <https://petermolnar.net/photo/wales-capel-rhosydd/> , licensed under CC-BY-NC-ND-4.0 .